I love my stories about Dr. Kathryn Railyly that carry on from that final, gut-wrenching airport scene of "Twelve Monkeys". In fact, I'd like to share them with the world!

That being said, the scripts on the website aren't quite enough. Like many millions of "Twelve Monkeys" fans out there I'd love to see a good sequel or two or three actually filmed, so long as they're faithful and aren't just remakes.

So, I am attempting to have the producers of the original "Twelve Monkeys" evaluate these scripts. This isn't toward "making these movies" directly, since I know these scripts aren't good enough. But, they might inspire the producers to improve upon them and make the films.

After all, we only have a couple of years left if we want to reprise the original actors and actresses in the roles that made them famous in this wonderful story.

Unfortunately, so far I have been unsuccessful at getting the producers to review the scripts. They don't say they "don't like them", they just say they "can't look at them" - because of the manner in which I am submitting them.

So, till I learn that these cannot be made, I'm withholding Part III, "Tempesta Tormenta", from the Web audience.

"TT" has a big ending to what is a really big adventure, and I'd rather it be known only as the end of a trilogy of movie sequels - if there's even a remote chance of that happening.

However, if the rights-holders do ever review the scripts and decide they don't like them, then I look forward to releasing "Tempesta Tormenta" to the World Wide Web audience so you can see how Kathryn's epic journey concludes.

But here's hoping otherwise! These would be great movies!
